NORTH DAKOTA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Establishment

The North Dakota Agricultural College was located at Fargo in 1899, according to the provisions of the state constitution. On March 2, 1890, the first legislative assembly established the institution under the provisions of the Morrill act of 1862. Under state and federal provisions it is then the state's school of technology.

The college was organized for educational work October 15, 1890, and its first activities were carried on in rented quarters in the city of Fargo and in rooms rented from Fargo College. In 1891, its first building on the present campus was erected and the institution was transferred to this building in September, 1891.

Organization and Development

From its beginning, the North Dakota Agricultural College offered instruction in agriculture, engineering, home economics and the sciences with supplementary work in English, mathematics and the social and natural sciences. For many years its major work was in the nature of special and courses in agriculture, home economics and engineering. By far the greater part of its instruction was subcollegiate in character and it was not until 1910 under the administration of President John Henry Worst that there developed any vision of the real purposes of the school. In that year, the collegiate curricula were entirely reorganized and collegiate instruction began to be stressed. The college proper began to grow although the coming on of the World War caused some temporary shrinkage in all departments of the institution. In 1917, Dr. Edwin Freemont Ladd succeeded Dr. Worst as president but continued the policies that had been started. In 1921, Dr. Ladd was elected United States Senator and was succeeded as president by Dr. John Lee Coulter who perfected the organization of the institution's program as follows:

I. The College

1. School of Agriculture: Departments of Agricultural Education, Agricultural Engineering, Agricultural Entomology, Agronomy, Animal Husbandry, Bacteriology, Dairy Husbandry, Horticulture and Forestry, Poultry Husbandry, Correspondence Courses.
2. School of Chemistry: Departments of Agriculture and Biological Chemistry, Inorganic and Qualitative Chemistry, Organic Chemistry, Physical and Industrial Chemistry, Quantitative Chemistry.

3. School of Education: Department of General Education, The Model High School.
4. School of Home Economics: Departments of Art and Design, Clothing and Textiles, Foods and Nutrition, Home Economics Education, Household and Institutional Management.
5. School of Mechanic Arts: Departments of Architecture and Architectural Engineering, Civil Engineering, Physics.
6. School of Pharmacy
7. School of Science and Literature: Departments of Botany and Plant Physiology, English and Philosophy, Geology and Mineralogy, History, Mathematics, Modern Languages, Public Discussion and Social Service, Economic, Political and Social Science, Zoology and Physiology.
8. School of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery.
9. Unattached Departments: The Library, Military Science and Tactics, Music, Physical Training and Athletics.

II. Division of Research

III. Division of Extension

Buildings and Grounds

The college owns 960 acres of land that immediately joins the city of Fargo on the north and west. Under normal economic conditions this land is worth in excess of $100,000.00. About one hundred acres are used for the campus proper which has been laid out in beautiful drives and ornamented with numerous clusters of trees, hedges, and shrubbery.

On the campus are twenty-one buildings that are used exclusively for educational purposes. Most of these buildings are fine examples of modern architecture, of the best reinforced concrete and steel construction and fireproof, each admirable designed for its specific purpose. The insurable value of the buildings is $1,234,335.00. Classroom, laboratory, and shop equipment has an insurable value of $627,023.00. The library contains about 90,000 bound volumes exclusive of government reports, bound magazines, bulletins and other periodicals.

Academic Standards

North Dakota Agricultural College is fully accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and by the Regents of the University of the State of New York. It is rated "A" by the University of Illinois.

Volume 2, Number 8 of the Journal of Higher Education, December, 1931, publishes a study by Dean J. B. Johnson of the School of Science, Literature and Arts of the University of Minnesota on the ability of transfer students to maintain a scholarship as satisfactory ability among the nearly 500 institutions included in the study. Among the institutions transferring 30 or more students, North Dakota Agricultural College ranks second.

Athletics

Since its founding, North Dakota Agricultural College has been one of the strongest competitors in any phase of sport sanctioned by the North Central Conference of accredited schools. Numerous times the school has captured the conference title in both major sports, football and basketball. To cite more recent accomplishments: in 1932 both football and basketball all conference titles were annexed by the school. Last fall North Dakota Agricultural College placed second in the football conference race, suffering its only set back from the hands of a strong South Dakota State College team. What will be the results of this year's basketball team are yet rather undecided, however, if records are indicative of the year's strength, we are again to be considered as leading contender in the North Central Conference competition.

Our sports program is, however, not limited to the above mentioned. The school maintains and encourages competition in such fields as boxing, wrestling, tumbling, tennis, and a very active intramural and interfraternity basketball and touchball schedule. Such a program offers every student in the institution a chance for representation in some line of sports.

Faculty

The teaching staff numbers 123. In degrees, professional preparation and teaching experience, the staff easily satisfies the requirements of all accrediting associations. Many of the departments, notably agriculture, botany and chemistry have contributed notable results in research and have wide recognition. The head of the department of public discussion is founder of the "Little Country Theatre" movement and is an international figure. The registrar is founder of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars, one of the larger and more active professional educational associations. Difficult as is current admission to medical schools, the best of these accept without question applicants who have the recommendation of the head of the department of zoology and physiology of North Dakota Agricultural College.

Fraternities

There are fifteen fraternities (social) on the campus. Of these, thirteen are affiliated with national organizations. Of the twenty honorary fraternities at North Dakota Agricultural College, fourteen are chapters of national organizations. In addition to the above fraternities, there are fourteen technological clubs.

The work is not graphic in the descriptive sense; the music does not seek to imitate, but rather to reflect in modern musical idiom a cross section of life from the standpoint of a press room -- resounding to the rhythm of daily human struggle, grinding out "Headlines" ---"Headlines" of war, fire, earthquake, "Headlines" of scandal, crime, murder, life, love, religion, death--- humanity's never ceasing conflict with itself."Headlines" --the rhythm of life.

A Resume of State College Band

In the fall of 1902, Claude Nugent, then the Secretary of State College and H. M. Rudd, at the present time Secretary of the musicians union and director of the Civic orchestra in Fargo, discussed plans for the organization of a band at State College. They decided to carry out their plans and issued a call for band members. That fall about twelve men came to rehearsals. Some of them had instruments and the rest had to borrow them. Their activities were somewhat limited as they traveled in an old overland stage coach which held some of the men inside and the rest outside. However, they managed to attend two or three football games. Doctor C. S. Putnam, out director, was practicing medicine at that time and did not have the slightest idea of being connected with these men in any way. One time when they were parading up and down Broadway in their overland coach, Doc happened to be standing on a corner listening to them play when a business man stepped up to him and said, "Doc, did you ever hear such an infernal racket in your life. There ought to be a law against such sounds being inflicted on the public." Doc replied to this saying, "Give the kids time they're young yet."

Later on in the winter of 1902 they bought fifteen instruments at a total sum of fifty dollars. They bought them from a farmer who had an organization amongst the farmers. They started new members on these instruments and began to have regular rehearsals.

On the tenth of Jan., 1903, Doc came to State College teaching four classes in arithmetic. The next April Director Rudd received a contract with a concert band and left Fargo. Doc was asked to take over the teaching and directing of the band. On the twelfth of April he had his first rehearsal and fifteen men answered the roll call. There were only five or six men who knew anything about music at all. Some had just begun to play that spring term. They couldn't play any tune with any pleasure about it. It was really a beginner's band and it was many years before they played a concert and really became a band worth hearing. After that the bank increased quite a lot in numbers, and purchased much new equipment and changed to newer uniforms. They were brought up to about twenty-five - thirty-five members each year, but in 1914 Doc received a chance to go to Aberdeen and take charge of that band. He went with the understanding that if he didn't like it there he could return to State. H. B. Bachman, who had been Doc's assistant, took his place in 1914.

The next fall a man who was a teacher of voice and a choir leader in Fargo was engaged as director with Bachman. They took charge together until 1915 when friction arose between them and Bachman resigned. Many of the band also resigned and in the spring of 1915 at the annual inspection they turned out thirteen men and four of these men were from downtown who weren't even going to school. In order to improve conditions, in the fall of 1915 Bachman was again put in charge with the former director.

In 1916 , however, Bachman graduated and that summer Doc came back. He arrived in July and took charge at the opening of college that fall. He has been here ever since, having started with about forty men.

Many changes have been made in our policy since that time. Men now are not taken into the band unless they have had high school experience and are at least able to handle a high school grade in music. In many cases students come to the band who are very finely grounded in fundamentals and very fine players. The type of music played has also undergone a great change. In the beginning bands grade one and two music was played and now we play symphonies, overtures, and operatic selections of the finest concert band type.

In the history of our band many outstanding men have been sent out from State College. A few examples are H. B. Bachman and his "million dollar" band, Bachman was a seven year pupil here. James Stamp - a four year pupil, is now first trumpeter in the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. Ralph Mainwaring, now in ~~the~~ Oregon, solo trombonist in Portland played with that band in Seattle. Byron Hanson, after three years went to the University of Wisconsin and was solo baritone in the band for two years. Ray Putnam, Doc. Putnam's son, traveled with an orchestra to Minneapolis and Chicago, and played with some of the finest orchestras in this country at Chicago and Cleveland. Many such examples could be cited as making names for themselves in a musical way.

We have been handicapped in our upward progress by a lack of instruments. In the past ten years no new instruments have been bought and some are still using government, quarter-master corp, instruments that have been repaired from time to time. At present another big handicap is that we have out grown our accommodations. We have one hundred twelve members and when the band was in its' beginning stage, Music Hall was ample, but now it is filled to capacity and we have overflowed into Festival Hall. We have over two hundred eighty students coming in and out of Music Hall every week, this includes, of course, two band sections, drum and bugle corp, private pupils, string sections, and men's and women's glee clubs. Outside of these two handicaps the band has had fairly good support. One of the finest material helps is the remittance of incidental fees for Junior and Seniors. The band has not, however, received enough money out of student activity fees to pay for all expenses. We have always given concerts and financed various undertakings to raise enough money to make out trips. There has always been a cordial feeling between the band and downtown citizens, and a great deal of help has been received from them.

We always turn out for games and play at all military functions. We have always received high compliments and high marks for our R. O. T. C. inspections, for our playing and for our maneuvering. We also turn out for National holidays and important Civic days such as governor receptions and the receptions for other notable visitors.

We have exercised a wide influence for State College. We are drawing students to the institution through various channels. We broadcast every Friday over station WDAY, from five o'clock to five-thirty, and draw students from all over the state as a result of this. We play concerts in the high schools and are interesting high school students continually. Each member of the band is pledged to attempt to bring back a new band member with him at the beginning of each year and results have been very satisfying.

At present we are working on a concert to be given the nineteenth of this month. Funds from this concert are to be used to send us to North Dakota University for the basketball games between the two schools. We are including a few of our concert programs in which are expressed out typical musical efforts.

601 Ramsey Tower
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Gentlemen:

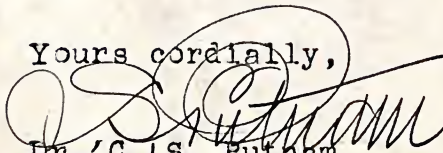

I have at this college a group of band musicians called Gamma Sigma Beta. This band fraternity, I understand, has petitioned your body for recognition and initiation by the national Kappa Kappa Psi. I want to say that this group of young fellows are all live wires. They all have a mark of 77 or better---most of them much better. They are all profficient musicians, in most places they are play^{ing} first chairs in the band. They have been my shock troops, my advisors, and my dependable ones in any project which has come up. They have proved themselves worthy of additional honors in the musical fraternity. I can heartily second their petition and sincerely hope that your national body will look favorably upon their petition and grant their request.

This matter has been hanging fire for many years. I have had correspondence with your organization ever since the Alpha Chapter was organized but every time we have made movement in your direction, something has intervened until now it has become possible for us to make this petition movement.

I understand the boys are sending you various pictures of the organization with some of our programs. We are presenting a full concert on Tuesday night the 19th and I will send you a copy of the program as soon as printed. We are also broadcasting a half hour program every Friday afternoon from the college which is illiciting much favorable comment.

Hoping this petition of the boys will meet with your approval and that soon we will be in the ranks of Kappa Kappa Psi, I am

Yours cordially,

Dear Sirs:

The local Gamma Sigma Beta fraternity has requested that I write you concerning the type of students belonging to their organization registered in the School of Chemistry.

I am pleased to say that the three members of this fraternity, registered in the School of Chemistry, are fine students. Their scholastic average is well above that of the institution. They will rank either in the upper third or in the top rank of the middle third of the students of this institution.

These young men impress me as serious minded individuals with a definite purpose in life.

The three students of sophomore standing registered in the School of Chemistry from Gamma Sigma Beta fraternity are: Chas. Evers, Oliver Rowe, and Max Thal.

Gentlemen:

I wish to inform you that our College Council approved the application of our local band fraternity, Gamma Sigma Beta, to your National Organization for affiliation.

We count our band an asset of importance to the institution and hold that students who have had training in it are of greater value to the communities of the state where they reside.

I feel that our College band is worthy of the consideration which they request.

Yours very truly,
